Notes:-

Very prominently sited on the quayside adjoining locks between inner and outer basins of the South Dock. Formerly known as "Power Station".

Dated "SHT 1900", restored 1985.

Two-storey industrial building, red brick with dark brick dressings, tall south tower (formerly accumulator?). Hipped slate roofs, projecting parapets and eaves with diagonal headers. Giant arch treatment to window bays, modern brickwork without dark dressings to west end, roll-moulded angles in dark brick to tower and adjoining bays. Oculi in blind panels to tower top, stonework bandcourse and eaves, datestone with partly modern inscription at base, inset modern relief sculpture. Modern glazed lean-to extensions in angle to right, main entrance up modern steps.

Three-bay rear elevation towards Gloucester Place with mostly original detailing, wallhand steps down to east with blind panels over three-bay arcaded ground floor treatment. Further three-bay arcaded and gabled elevation faces east.

Half length of bow trussed girder swing-bridge (formerly operated by power from the Pump House) survives on the quayside to the south-west.

Group Value.
