Notes:-

On east corner of St James' Crescent and north side of Walter Road. No 43 St James' Crescent is part of the same development but with entrance facing Crescent rather than Walter Road.

Terrace of 5 houses circa 1865, in Jacobethan style with shaped gables. Three storeys, stucco with banded ground floor, slate or tiled roofs. Each house has two bays, R bay broader and slightly advanced, shaped gable with pinnacle, and urns at shoulders (lost at Nos95 and 96); second floor window with moulded surround, ground floor splayed bay. Left bay narrower slightly recessed, gable with pinnacle (lost at No 96); second floor round-headed window with moulded surround, ground floor entrance doorway with moulded doorway and shallow bracketed hood; but No 43 St James' Crescent has extra bay window, and is entered from side, No 96 has window with shallow architrave. Return to west (left) has gable with pinnacle and urn to shoulders, second floor round-headed window with moulded surround, two first floor windows with moulded surround, ground floor deep porch with round-headed entrance doorway, round-headed windows to sides, window to right of porch; to left, one window to first and ground floors, and lower block with one window; single-storey ground floor section set forward, door to left, then tripartite sash window, then splayed bay window. Return to right (west) has narrow porch.

Included as well-detailed stucco terrace in Jacobethan style, on corner site overlooking St James' churchyard (despite degradation of No 96).
